FULL POTENTIAL CASE STUDY SUGGESTED FORMAT

Note: Case Studies arising from the project can be written, drawn or recorded and can include photographs, video or sound files. The structure is not set. This is a suggested structure.

A Summary section sums up the case study in two or three sentences or illustrations.

A Context section describes those things that are important to know before the delivery period took place or that took place during the delivery period but which were not directly related to the delivery.

An Experience section describes those things that are important to know that took place during the delivery period as a result of the delivery.

A Reflections section describes the important sense that the participant and the delivery partner staff and/or families put on the experience in the light of the context.

A Further Thoughts and References section enables links to be made between the contents of the case study and other relevant published and unpublished sources, descriptions, ideas and accounts.
